

INTRODUCTION | Alonzo Jones

Alonzo Jones is a nationally recognized speaker, higher education leader, and student development expert with more than 30 years of experience helping young adults navigate the transition to college and adulthood. He currently serves as Associate Athletic Director for Championship Life at Arizona State University, where he leads initiatives focused on student engagement, leadership, personal growth, and life skills development.

Known for his energetic and relatable style, Jones delivers thought-provoking presentations that challenge students to make the most of their college experience. His programs help participants better understand the opportunities, responsibilities, and choices that shape their future while encouraging them to take ownership of their development from day one.

Jones holds a Bachelor of Science degree in Justice Studies from Arizona State University and a Master's degree in Developmental Education from Texas State University. He has received numerous honors for his contributions to student success and leadership education, including the Arizona State University College of Liberal Arts and Sciences Distinguished Alumni Award.

Whether speaking to incoming freshmen, student-athletes, student leaders, or campus organizations, Jones combines practical insight, real-world experience, and engaging storytelling to inspire students to fully engage in their college journey and maximize their potential.

Please help me welcome Alonzo Jones.

Updated 6.1.2026